

How to Get Some Perspective in Your Drawings

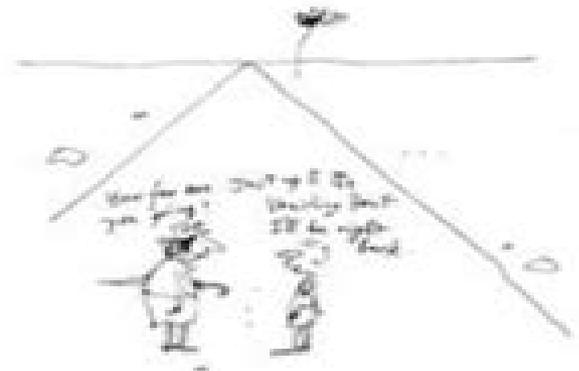

The amount of air getting to the lamp is the same, whether you're in front of it, or to the side, or behind it. But for those who walk away, or climb on it, and see it from above, there is one angle which affects the amount of air which reaches the lamp. This is one of those facts that you already know, or will know when you think in perspective. It's in determining the location of your hand here at the end of your arm.

Draw the idea of "things that look smaller" and you have some of the interesting conclusions that things that are "small" but may seem to completely invisible.

What things are in the second row that are in perspective showing the vanishing point.

Perhaps the easiest way to describe the vanishing point is this: if you are standing on a street highway, and there's some straight road that the highway disappears into the distance, what the two sides of it come together in the distance.
