

English Literature Of Plymouth Plantation –by William Bradford

OF PLYMOUTH PLANTATION:

- Plymouth Plantation: is one of the most significant texts of early American literature.
 - A 40-chapter journal that was written over a period of years.
 - Written by the second governor of the Plymouth colony in (Massachusetts).
 - It talks about and provides a glimpse of:
 - The Mayflower voyage.
 - The Mayflower Compact.
 - The life of settlers in the New World in the 17th century.
 - It became a foundational text.

- William Bradford: English man who became a separatist and a puritan (purify church).
 - He went to Holland fleeing persecution and searching for religious freedom.
 - He came to the NW on the Mayflower with 100 passengers (half were Pilgrims)
 - He was elected the second governor of the Plymouth colony.
 - He made the passengers sign the Mayflower Compact as they arrived (1620).

- Genre: historical narrative or historical account.

- Historical Narrative: a story about real people and events that happened in the past and told in a chronological order.

- Elements of historical narrative:
 1. Tells a true story about events that happened in the past.
 2. May be considered a primary source if the author observed the events personally.
 3. A narrative text that relates events in chronological order, or the order in which they happened.
 4. Descriptive with vivid details to help readers visualize the scenes.

- Why is Plymouth Plantation considered a foundational text?
 1. Because it has a significant importance in the US history since it provides one of the rarest documents about the colonial period in the 17th century as it highlights the life of the settlers there.
 2. Because this historical text contains the Mayflower Compact; therefore, it changes it from historical narrative into a foundational text.

- Foundational Text: a text that establishes a system, object, structure or institution.

- Why was the MFC signed and what did they sign on?
