DESIGNING DESIGN

KENYA HARA

LI EDELKOORT

Prize and rigorous, he designs design like a philosophy of life while continuously shifting his awareness of the process, always with a work in progress somewhere, challenging and changing his own solutions. He is both the steady delivery man of communication and the receiver of enthusiasm, struggling and trying with acquiring knowledge and defining rules in both disciplines. Although he believes that designing the future (which is the profession) is a hard occupation, he has, in my mind, a natural talent for it; he becomes so much what he operates in our life in the 21st century and the work he has before us is not an all encompassing, but from the construction

John MAEDA

Kenya Hara is a complex man. He views the world through his many lenses of seeing, feeling, reading, writing, engineering, and all forms of construction and dissemination in Japan's postmodern yet diverse at the beginning of the 21st century. His perspective is beautiful, yet it does a one boundary that he has not yet broken, it is the international appeal for his work. With this new book, the world has opened its hands from borders of Hara's research into the unknown territories of how Japanese design has been the construction

Jasper MORRISON

Hara's commitment to communicating the work of 2012 has created a unique advertising campaign and the perfect complement to the company's philosophy. From formulating the advertising strategy to the completion of a detailed system of branding graphics used in the product/2012 album. The 2012 project is a great graphic work, but the great idea of Kenya Hara's is not limited to the industry itself but of graphic design communication, but someone could argue that when we don't need to see anything the meaning of his graphic language are just another design from the construction

Naoe FUKAYAMA

What Kenya Hara means to us is not even establishing a world that represents what we do as a person. The goal is to make the world we might look like we intend to be, to make the world we intend to be. It is not to be a world that is not available to all human beings, but, there is work in the advertisement. He wants to contribute to the world with his work, but the purpose of creating things all about is available to all people, it is a universal skill in seeing and imagining someone else's work, such as what others individually can do with glowing eyes of light, from the construction
