Chinese Astrology, like that of some other Asian countries, consists of twelve signs that follow the lunar calendar in a twelve-year cycle. The story behind the origin of the astrological signs tells us that Buddha's death, twelve particular events were among them that came to occur later. To honor these events, people named the years after them, in the order of their arrival to Buddha's deathbed. Koreans believe that these twelve signs can predict someone's personality and influence one's destiny.
