
Intertextual Reading, Relecture, and Conversion*

Sean McEvenue

Professor of Old Testament, Concordia University

This article has resulted concretely from a debate that began five years ago among the editors of a proposed "International Catholic Bible Commentary." We agreed to two principles: first, that biblical commentary should not be paraphrase not only because paraphrase is boring and useless, but also because it becomes an alternate text replacing the biblical text; second, that commentary is more than supplemental information, since it should point to meaning. There agreement stopped, because meaning is a very elusive item.

In the work of exegetes one sees several tendencies coming together that could lead to a new hermeneutic for biblical commentary: (1) the growing despair over the possibility of believable history regarding the times and texts of the Hebrew Bible, and a growing gap between theology on the one hand and the ever-more-secular discipline of Near Eastern studies on the other; (2) the articulation and success of canonical criticism, which inevitably asks anew about New Testament reinterpretations of the Hebrew Bible; (3) the development of reader-response theory, which suddenly makes even the subjectivity of implied readers a factor in the meaning of the text—including readers in subsequent centuries in so far as they are truly implied; (4) the rediscovery of patristic exegesis as valuable in itself, as formative of the canon, and therefore as determinative about the meaning of biblical texts. All of this presupposes, but also remains very remote from, a historical-critical search for "original meaning," and the academic ideal on which recent generations of scholars have broken their teeth.

* This article is based on a paper presented to the Society of Biblical Literature International Conference, Dublin, July 1996.
