

A photograph of a wooden boardwalk leading to a fork in a forest path. The boardwalk is made of light-colored wood and has a simple wooden railing. It starts from the bottom center and splits into two paths that lead into a dense forest of tall, thin trees. The ground is covered with brown leaves and some green moss. The lighting is soft, suggesting a slightly overcast day or a shaded forest.

The Shaping of Rationality J. Wentzel van Huyssteen, 1999-07-20 This book arises out of a deep fascination with the relationship between human intelligence and rationality and with how our fragile but uniquely human ability to be rational invariably affects our everyday lives as well as our involvement with faith theology and the spectacular scientific achievements of our time After carefully analyzing the notion of rationality and examining how the skill of rationality is being challenged by postmodern culture J Wentzel van Huyssteen argues that it is precisely the problem of rationality that holds the key to understanding the complex forces shaping the radically different domains of religion and science today
