

The Riverbank

Mole had been spring cleaning all morning. He swept and dusted and painted. He worked until his back ached and his arms were very tired. But spring was in the air outside, and it had made Mole restless. He suddenly threw down his broom and cried, "Forget spring cleaning!" Then he bolted out of his front door. He scraped and scratched upward through the dirt until at last his snout poked out into the sunlight and he was rolling in the warm grass of a huge meadow.

"This is far better than painting," he said to himself. The sunshine felt hot on his fur, but a soft breeze blew around him. After living underground for so long, he felt like shouting for joy to hear the birds singing. Delighting in the thought of spring without its cleaning, Mole made his way across the meadow until he reached the hedge on the other side.

He thought he could not be happier when, as he wandered along, he suddenly found himself at the edge of a river. He had never seen a river – a sleek and twisting, gripping thing that gurgled and then left with a laugh. Mole was enchanted by the gleams and sparkles, rustles and swirls, chatter and bubble of the great river. He trotted excitedly along the riverbank until he grew tired and decided at last to rest.

As he sat on the grass and gazed across the river, Mole noticed a dark hole in the opposite bank. Something bright and small twinkled down in the heart of it, vanished, then twinkled once more like a tiny star. Then it winked at him, and so Mole knew that it was an eye peering at him. Slowly, a small face began to grow around it, like a frame around a picture.

It was a brown, round, little face, with whiskers, small ears, thick, silky hair, and with the same
