Paul Roazen noted in contrast to some of Freud's other followers Reik was prescient early on in distinguishing self-love from narcissism. Reik believed that genuine self-regard was the ultimate basis for developing the capacity to love. At times Reik seems to defend women at times to critique them. The author describes his book as an attempt to set forth what is required of an investigator into the unconscious mental processes of another person and what he achieves. In fact, the scope of the book is wider than this might suggest for it makes a good many incursions into the fields of general psychological method and principle, both normal and abnormal. Some of the topics dealt with are wit, tact, time and rhythm, memory and reminiscence, conjecture and comprehension, the ego mechanism, anticipation. The general thesis of the book is that when the true route of analysis and interpretation is followed, there must be somewhere near the beginning, always, an experience of shock or surprise. This and its significance are fully discussed and illustrated by a mass of original observations.
