

How to Get Some Perspective in Your Drawings

The amount of light getting to the object affects not only its brightness, but also just how large it can be rendered in perspective. For example, light that comes from above will cast a shadow on the ground, and the size of that shadow is one simple way to indicate the amount of light getting to the object. This is one of those facts that you should know as well as those that you should remember. It's a fact that will help you to draw things that are in perspective.

Draw the idea of "things that look smaller" and you can draw things that are smaller than things that are larger. But don't draw things that are completely invisible.

What things are in the world that are smaller than things that are larger? Draw the things that are smaller.

Perhaps the easiest way to draw things that are smaller is to draw things that are larger. If you are drawing a house, draw the things that are inside the house. If you are drawing a car, draw the things that are inside the car. If you are drawing a person, draw the things that are on the person. If you are drawing a tree, draw the things that are on the tree. If you are drawing a mountain, draw the things that are on the mountain. If you are drawing a city, draw the things that are in the city. If you are drawing a country, draw the things that are in the country. If you are drawing a world, draw the things that are in the world.
