Emotional Intelligence
Activities for Kids

Emotion Gradients
Create a list of emotions (happy and angry, surprised, etc.), and have children take turns acting out the emotions without using any words while the others guess what emotion they are performing. This activity helps children recognize and express emotions nonverbally.

Emotion Cards
Create a deck of cards with different emotions written on them. Children can draw a card and act out the emotion for their friends to guess.

Feelings Thermometer
Create a scale of emotions from calm to extremely upset. Children can point to where they currently fall on the thermometer to express how they are feeling, building self-regulation and emotional awareness.

Emotion Sorting Game
Prepare a collection of pictures, objects, or scenarios depicting various emotions, and ask children to sort them into categories based on the emotions they represent. This activity helps children categorize and label different emotions accurately.

Mindfulness Exercises
Introduce simple mindfulness exercises such as deep breathing, body scans, or guided imagery to help children become more aware of their emotions and learn to manage stress and anxiety effectively.

Gratitude Practice
Encourage children to keep a gratitude journal where they write down things they are thankful for each day. This practice helps cultivate positive emotions, resilience, and appreciation for the good things in life.

Emotion Art Collage
Provide magazines, newspapers, and art supplies for children to create collages that represent different emotions. Encourage them to discuss their artwork and the emotions it portrays, building creativity and emotional expression.

Emotion Web
Take children on a nature walk around their neighborhood, encouraging them to notice and describe different sights, sounds, and smells. Have them draw a web that connects these observations to various emotions and sensations.

Feelings Wheel
Create a wheel with different emotions arranged in segments. Children can spin the wheel and act out the emotion they land on. This activity helps build self-awareness and emotional regulation skills.

Emotion Matching Game
Create a memory game where children match pairs of cards with images or words representing different emotions. This can improve memory skills and reinforce emotion recognition.
