Abstract. Panel vector autoregression (PVAR) models have been increasingly used in applied research. While progress significantly improved in the last decade, PVAR models are often estimated as stacked VARs in most empirical packages. Panel PVAR model estimation and inference are often complicated with associated nonstationarity, cointegration, and heterogeneity. In this article, we briefly discuss panel VARs, VARs, cointegration, and estimation of panel vector autoregression in a generalized context of panel VARs. We also present a set of programs to estimate PVARs in Stata. We illustrate the great power of programs by using simulated panel datasets.

Keywords: PVAR, panel, cointegration, programming, inference, simulation, panel, vector autoregression, VAR, stacked panel

1 Introduction

Panel vector autoregression (PVAR) models (adapted to the econometric literature) have been increasingly used in econometric applications (see, for example, McAleer (2003)). The literature in a time-series econometric context on cointegration, although interesting, continues to be an empirical puzzle in the estimation of panel VARs and is beyond the scope of the current article (see McAleer (2003)). While the applications of VARs in econometric settings (see, for example, Tsay and Shinn (2003)) have been widely used, there are few available software applications using VARs.

In this article, we briefly review panel VAR models, estimation, inference, and simulation in a generalized context of panel VARs (homogeneous and panel VARs) of programs which are designed using the standard Stata language. As with other time-series econometric panel VARs (see Levin and Lin (1993)), this article also provides available inference for panel cointegration.¹ This article illustrates an efficient package of programs

Estimation of Panel Vector Autoregression in Stata, 2016 Macroeconomic Policy Framework for Africa's Structural Transformation Carlos Lopes, Abdalla Hamdok, Adam Elhiraika, 2017-08-11 The main objective of this book is to identify the key sources of growth which have played a significant role in Africa's recent robust growth as well as its efforts towards economic transformation. The book assesses to what extent the existing macroeconomic frameworks among African countries have been streamlined to the countries' development priorities in order to achieve long-term growth and economic transformation. Taking into account the diversity of African countries, the authors establish the economic linkages between relevant macroeconomic policy variables and the key sources of growth and development among the selected African economies based on both theoretical and empirical underpinnings. Following this, an outline of a macroeconomic framework for Africa's long-term growth and economic transformation is suggested. Time Series Econometrics John D.

Levendis, 2023-12-23 Revised and updated for the second edition, this textbook allows students to work through classic texts in economics and finance using the original data and replicating their results. In this book, the author rejects the theorem-proof approach as much as possible and emphasizes the practical application of econometrics. They show with examples how to calculate and interpret the numerical results. This book begins with students estimating simple univariate models in a step-by-step fashion using the popular Stata software system. Students then test for stationarity while replicating the actual results from hugely influential papers such as those by Granger, Newbold, and Nelson-Plosser. Readers will learn about structural breaks by replicating papers by Perron and Zivot-Andrews. They then turn to models of conditional volatility, replicating papers by Bollerslev. Students estimate multi-equation models such as vector autoregressions and vector error correction mechanisms, replicating the results in influential papers by Sims and Granger. Finally, students estimate static and dynamic panel data models, replicating papers by Thompson and Arellano-Bond. The book contains many worked-out examples and many data-driven exercises. While intended primarily for graduate students and advanced undergraduates, practitioners will also find the book useful. How to best start learning time series econometrics: Learning by doing. This is the ethos of this book. What makes this book useful is that it provides numerous worked-out examples along with basic concepts. It is a fresh, no-nonsense, practical approach that students will love when they start learning time series econometrics. I recommend this book strongly as a study guide for students who look for hands-on learning experience.
