

Design

The cover is designed to prevent collection of dust and is easy to clean. The UniSlide H is tailored to different customer requirements. The motor, control unit and transmission are all assembled on the door sliding track. The movement is transmitted to the door leaf by means of a tooth belt. A linear actuator is used to lift the door leaf from closed position onto the sliding track.

The door leaf consists either of a core faced with plastic laminate to both sides or of injected polyurethane faced with stainless steel on both sides. The door is hung on two plastic wheels, which together with the sliding track give exceptionally smooth and silent operation. The sealing against the wall is made by a rubber seal. A flat rubber gasket is fitted to the underside of the door to seal against the floor. This will give full hermetic seal. The doors can be delivered with lead for radiation protection. Windows, mechanical lock and carthing kit are other options.

The door can also be manually opened by means of handles on both sides of the door. To make the manual opening easier, a push-& go function will automatically control the opening and closing of the door.
