The Four Dimensions Of Service Management

The ITIL guiding principles

Guiding principle	Description
Focus on value	Everything that the organization does needs to create, directly or indirectly, a benefit to the organization. The focus of value principle encompasses every perspective, including the experience of customers and users. Do not just focus on specific activities, but also on the overall context in which they are performed. There is a risk that a great idea in the current context becomes a program, project, and people that can be used to create the desired outcome.
Start where you are	The current state should be investigated and assessed, taking into account what is already in use. Do not attempt to do everything at once. Start high, then gradually move to more detailed activities. By organizing work into smaller, manageable activities that can be completed and completed in a timely manner, it is more likely to maintain a strategic focus on each effort.
Progress iteratively with feedback	Work in small, frequent, and often visible increments of work that allow you to focus on and improve what is most important. Working together on small, frequent increments results in faster progress, more frequent feedback, and increased likelihood of long-term success.
Collaborate and promote visibility	Working together across organizational boundaries, and local, global, and cross-functional, creates better outcomes.

Costs

Achieving desired outcomes requires resources (and therefore costs) which often associated with loss. Service providers help their customers to achieve outcomes and to design or take on some of the associated costs and risks. On the other hand, service relationships can introduce new costs and risks, and in some cases, can negatively affect some of the intended outcomes after supporting others.
