

Plans for Reconstruction

After the Civil War, the country was divided, and it became obvious that there would be some difficulty in repairing the damage that had been inflicted upon the South.

At the end of the war, a plan for Reconstruction was drafted by a group of officials. These officials proposed a series of Reconstruction Amendments, including the Reconstruction Act. The Reconstruction Amendments Between 1865 and 1870, three Amendments to the Constitution were ratified, which would become known as the Reconstruction Amendments. Numerically, they are the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments, which gave equal rights to the people as well as newly freed slaves. Much of the legislation that came after 1865 is dedicated to the work of the Radical Republicans, who favored abolition and did not seek compromise or ending slavery. Despite Congressional support, there were many Southerners who were not in favor of these amendments, and they worked to increase the chances that the Reconstruction would fail.

The 13th Amendment passed in Congress on January 31, 1865, a few months before President Lincoln was assassinated. It was not formally ratified until December 6 of that year. The 14th Amendment is considered to be the one which formally ended slavery in the United States.
