

Provisions for assessment of existing structures in the second-generation concrete Eurocode

Craig Cicco examines ways in which the second-generation of Eurocode 2 will facilitate the assessment of existing concrete-framed structures.

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) (code of practice for concrete structures) includes additional provisions that enable it to be used for assessment of existing structures. This article outlines some of these provisions, which are likely to be of assistance when using Eurocode 2 to assess concrete-framed structures. These include:

- determining characteristic material properties for assessment
- calculating design loads or factors where testing is used to determine material properties
- determining values of deterioration
- load testing (load and anchorage lengths of fasteners)
- dealing with existing structures' capacity to the current standard
- using gross cross-sections for assessment of their resistance.

Material properties

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) requires characteristic values of material properties to assess the material properties. Annex E provides guidance for tests when to obtain relevant values for assessment. It references clause EN 1992-1-1 (2004) to determine the test characteristics of concrete strength from testing. It provides a range of factors to calculate its deterioration  $f_{cm}$  from  $f_{cm}$  (making some provision for 'deterioration' where testing is not to be carried out in the region being assessed). Additional information is provided in the standard to enable characteristic values of steel strength or reinforcement to be determined from testing should steel grades used in the structure not be available from relevant information.

The UK National Annex committee is presently reviewing this factor for determining  $f_{cm}$  from  $f_{cm}$ . It may incorporate such amendments to the characteristic values to assess agreement with values obtained from EN 1992-1-1 (2004) with the UK National Annex, taking into account the ability to adjust design factors for material to Annex A of the new standard. It may also provide different methods of determining  $f_{cm}$  from  $f_{cm}$  where gross concrete cross-sections and the region being assessed, such as using the results of laboratory tests, have calibrated inter-relationship data, along with relevant provisions in EN 1992-1-1 (2004).

Partial material factors

Annex A of the new standard provides new tables to enable partial material factors to be assigned based on material test results from the structure. This should generally reduce the value of these factors, when a low coefficient of variation of material strength is obtained from testing, which is beneficial for assessed members generally. The standard permits test data available from records to also be used where suitable and appropriate.

Deterioration

Provision is made for deterioration of concrete, which is generally an issue. The level of the deterioration for these all values determined with deterioration, but in assessing deterioration for typical types of deterioration and their impact. It also includes provisions guide to its determination in assessment is likely to affect the properties of the test.

Other tests

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) also includes EN 1992-1-1 (2004). The standard includes provisions for the assessment of existing structures. The provisions are based on a new extended-member test of steel, test that was developed during the drafting of the standard EN 1992-1-1 (2004). The provisions also cover the variation of load resulting from variable loads.
