Demystifying Academic Writing in Higher Education: A Process View on Academic Textual Production Xinghua Liu, Rui Alexandre Alves, Angélique Aitken, Josef Schmied, 2025-10-30 Academic writing in this Research Topic refers to the type of writing demonstrating students' disciplinary knowledge of and proficiency in synthesizing, analyzing, and responding critically to new information. Hyland (2004) and Swales (1990) which may include those genres like course essays, project reports, research proposals, lab notes, journal articles, conference papers, theses, and dissertations. As the current workplaces have become increasingly specialized, higher education worldwide has been increasingly charged with the task of developing students' academic writing and correspondingly on students' parts, learning through writing has been necessary for them to succeed in higher education. To prepare university students for writing challenges during the past decades, numerous studies have been devoted to the study of linguistic and rhetorical resources in students' academic writing under such umbrella terms like style, reader awareness, authorial voice, writers' identity, stance, evaluation, textual structures, steps, and moves. Charles Hunston and Hinkel (2002). However, previous research on academic writing has been predominantly focused on the linguistic and rhetorical aspects, namely the final product of students' writing, while the nature and processes of composition, students' engagement, and individual differences, and the influence of contextual factors like emerging technology have been underexplored. Thus, the goal of this Research Topic is to bring a process-oriented and dynamic perspective to the study of textual production in academic contexts by both encouraging an expanded view of existing research paradigms and also welcoming novel approaches. Data can be collected by using corpus building, interviews, and questionnaires, but we would also welcome the use of experimental methods and a mixed-method approach for data collection. Meanwhile, previous research mainly studied university students who were learning English as a second or foreign language; hence, we also welcome research examining first language writers and students who are learning a second or foreign language other than English. We believe for the study of the complex phenomenon like academic writing, no single method or tool can suffice. Therefore, we strongly recommend a more creative perspective in data collection and analyzing and interpreting academic writing. Papers can present quantitative data analyses based on experimental design or qualitative data analyses stemmed from more ethnographic-oriented research. Systematic review studies are also welcome. We encourage contributions related but not restricted to the following topics:

1. Cognitive processes in academic texts: planning, composing, and revisions, and student
