Identification of high priority chemicals and other chemicals of concern has prompted a growing number of state and local governments as well as major companies to take steps beyond existing hazardous chemical federal legislation. Interest in approaches and policies that ensure that any new substances substituted for chemicals of concern are assessed as carefully and thoroughly as possible has also burgeoned. The overarching goal of these approaches is to avoid regrettable substitutions which occur when a toxic chemical is replaced by another chemical that later proved unsuitable because of persistence, bioaccumulation, toxicity or other concerns. Chemical alternative assessments are tools designed to facilitate consideration of these factors to assist stakeholders in identifying chemicals that may have the greatest likelihood of harm to human and ecological health and to provide guidance on how the industry may develop and adopt safer alternatives. A Framework to Guide Selection of Chemical Alternatives develops and demonstrates a decision framework for evaluating potentially safer substitute chemicals as primarily determined by human health and ecological risks. This new framework is informed by previous efforts by regulatory agencies, academic institutions and others to develop alternative assessment frameworks that could be operationalized. In addition to hazard assessments, the framework incorporates steps for life cycle thinking which considers possible impacts of a chemical at all stages including production, use and disposal, as well as steps for performance and economic assessments. The report also highlights how modern information sources such as computational modeling can supplement traditional toxicology data in the assessment process. This new framework allows the evaluation of the full range of benefits and shortcomings of substitutes and examination of tradeoffs between these risks and factors such as product functionality, product efficacy, process safety and resource use. Through case studies, this report demonstrates how different users in contrasting decision contexts with diverse priorities can apply the framework. This report will be an essential resource to the chemical industry, environmentalists, ecologists and state and local governments.

Learning-Based Methods for Visual Understanding in Engineering and Production Workflows Javier Villena Toro, 2026-02-06. Artificial intelligence (AI) has advanced rapidly across engineering and industrial domains, yet its adoption in production environments is often constrained by the need for higher system reliability, limited availability of high quality data, and the challenge of embedding tacit engineering knowledge into learning based models. These limitations hinder the broader industrial push toward flexible, data driven automation capable of handling increasing product variability and shorter production cycles. This thesis investigates how learning based methods can be designed and integrated as reliable perception components within production workflows. Through four complementary case studies, the work demonstrates how visual representations ranging from Computer Aided Design (CAD) derived images and engineering drawings to point clouds and RGB-D images can be leveraged to address concrete industrial challenges across multiple stages of the manufacturing pipeline. The first case study predicts fixturing clamp configurations for welding operations in automotive manufacturing by learning geometric patterns from CAD derived representations. The second applies optical character recognition to engineering drawings to accelerate quality control and documentation workflows The third examines scene reconstruction and 3D object detection from point clouds using synthetic data generation to mitigate data scarcity The fourth develops a fast zero shot pose estimation approach for robotic manipulation enabling reliable object localization in dynamic industrial environments Taken together these studies show how AI methods informed by structured engineering knowledge can increase process efficiency reduce manual workload and help resolve persistent automation bottlenecks in modern manufacturing

Systems Biology Application in Synthetic Biology Shailza Singh, 2016-09-08. This book introduces students to methods that will help them understand behaviour in terms of cellular components and their interactions in non-intuitive ways which calls for an interdisciplinary approach combining mathematical, chemical, computational and biological strategies. Tibor Ganti was one of the early pioneers who proposed a theoretical framework to understand living principles in terms of chemical transformation cycles and their coupling. The twenty-first century then brought with it a novel systems paradigm which shone new light on all previous work and was accompanied by numerous implications for the way we conceive of chemical and biological complexity today. This book seeks to equip students to take advantage of any field that investigates living systems. Based on a conceptualisation of science-oriented branches, engineering-oriented branches and biology as astoundingly complex fields, those structures laden with biochemical detail encompass a deeper theory unifying our knowledge of designed systems. Readers will be pleasantly surprised at how lucidly the topics are presented. The book offers an indispensable resource for students and professionals working in systems and synthetic biology or any of the various related fields of research. Advances in Bioenergy Peter D. Lund, John A. Byrne, Goeran Berndes, Iacovos
