

Questions and answers concerning the ordination of women

In the future it will be possible for women to be ordained to ministry in the New Apostolic Church. This decision raises many follow-up questions. Some initial Frequently Asked Questions have already been assembled, and will be supplemented as needed.

This catalogue of questions is limited to the global policy decision and issues of a global scope. Any additional questions regarding implementation in the individual Regional Churches will be clarified by the responsible regional leadership. Answers to those questions will be developed and published there.

The team at the New Apostolic Church International is available to answer any questions you may have about the global policy decision: mail@nacl.org

Basic questions

☐ Why is the concept of ministry changing?

The understanding of church, the sacraments, and ministry are of essential significance for our Church.

The Catechism contains a well outlined understanding of the church and sacraments, but it only offers a general summary of our understanding of ministry. There was a need to better formulate our understanding of ministry and develop it to the same level as our understanding of the church and the sacraments.

☐ What ministerial designations apply to women in ministry?

Women may be ordained as Deacons, Priests, or Apostles. Beyond that, women—like men—can be appointed or assigned to perform leadership or assistant functions in the congregation, the district, or the Global Church, for example, as congregational or district rectors, assistants to the congregational or district rector, or as Bishops.
