Nationalistic Norwegians sought to reestablish native identity by creating and promulgating a new language based partly on rural dialects and partly on Old Norse. The upper and middle classes sought to retain a form of Norwegian close to Danish that would be intelligible to themselves and to their neighbours in Sweden and Denmark. The controversy has gone on ever since. One result is that the standard dictionaries of Norwegian ignore pronunciation for no version can be counted as received. Another is that there has been considerable variety and change in Norwe.

This volume presents results from a corpus based investigation into the metaphorical production of foreign language learners comparing texts written by Norwegian L2 learners of English with those written by British L1 students. Three types of questions are addressed. The first has empirically measured answers. For example, do L2 English writers produce more metaphors than L1 novice writers? How frequent are novel metaphors in an L2 as compared with an L1? The second type has more subjective answers. How creatively do L2 English learners employ metaphor? Are they even expected to be able to produce metaphor at all? The third type combines theoretical and methodological perspectives. How is metaphorical creativity identified? What is the potential role of metaphoric competence? Most importantly, how are metaphors identified? To this end, the newly developed Metaphor Identification Procedure is tested and critiqued. This book is intended for metaphor researchers, corpus linguists, applied linguists and language educators.
