

18th - 19th Century Lit - EOC Practice #3 - International Texts

"Das Temperamentale Problem London im Jahre 1841"

By Oswald Reuschling

This passage in Reuschling's text is representative of the German Romanticism that came into vogue in Germany in 1830 and peaked at age 23. Reuschling was left with a great internationalist outlook. He only 20 years old, but possessed deep learning, following on the knowledge of his family's progressive military history. Two years later, he supported his uncle and his six friends including young Hans Grimm, Hermann von Helldorf, in relation of the King.

Just yet, despite his uncle and high standing in German society, Reuschling was not present. During a stay in Paris, he learned of the American soldiers' revolt against the British. He began to attend and participate in meetings for German (political) societies, with other intellectuals who sympathized with the soldiers and their quest of independence. He was also exposed to the French, Pierre Leroux, whose text was read aloud freely about the ideas of revolution and setting up a Republic.

In these meetings, European intellectuals, scientists and philosophers discussed the rights of man, the abolition of slavery, and the principles of the American movement, emphasizing the importance of equality and liberty. These principles were heavily influenced by the Enlightenment (rationalism, universalism) and the American Revolution that Enlightenment thinkers viewed as a necessary and revolutionary step. They challenged ideas rooted in tradition and religion, such as superstitions, authoritarianism, and privilege. Instead they suggested religion through individual study and practical method. Among their philosophies was the idea that citizens should be granted equality and individual freedoms.

In America, Progress was a necessity, which means a deeper penetration of society.
