Hence, operational and systems management systems management is the management of systems for processes that create goods and/or services. Having the operational systems effectively done is the capability that will turn the long-term goals for these organizations. The concept of the CIM integrated data systems, that progressively combined data with higher systems, plants and other capabilities in the operational layers in manufacturing companies made some fundamental steps in producing goods. The integration and data in control in other related areas began using these systems. Furthermore, some manufacturing areas have been automated by using production computer facilities supported by the use of CIM.
