

Accounting cycle 1-8

- 1. Identify accounts affected by each transaction
- 2. Determine debits and credits for each account

1. Analyze each transaction to determine which accounts are affected and how they are affected (debit or credit). This step involves identifying the accounts involved in each transaction and determining whether each account should be debited or credited.

2. Determine the debit and credit amounts for each account. The total debits must equal the total credits for each transaction. This step involves calculating the amount to be debited to each account and the amount to be credited to each account.

3. Journalize the transactions. This step involves recording each transaction in the journal in chronological order. Each entry should include the date, a brief description of the transaction, and the debit and credit amounts.

4. Post the journal entries to the ledger. This step involves transferring the debit and credit amounts from the journal to the appropriate T-accounts in the ledger.

5. Prepare a trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts in the ledger and their debit and credit balances to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits.

Accounting cycle 9-10

9. Calculate the ending balances for each account. This step involves determining the debit and credit balances for each account at the end of the period.

10. Prepare the financial statements. This step involves using the ending balances from the ledger to prepare the income statement, balance sheet, and statement of owner's equity.

11. Close the temporary accounts. This step involves transferring the balances of the income statement, owner's equity, and dividend accounts to the permanent accounts.

12. Prepare the post-closing trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts in the ledger and their debit and credit balances to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits after the closing process.

13. Prepare the financial statements for the next period. This step involves using the ending balances from the post-closing trial balance to prepare the financial statements for the following period.
