

Your Challenge: Using resources more effectively to address the unique problems of each client.

An Evidence-Based Approach: Use ASI data to develop customized treatment plans and to monitor outcomes.

Where to Start: Get the tools and training resources you need online at no cost from the NIDA/SAMHSA Blending Initiative.

Treatment Planning M.A.T.R.S.—measurable, attainable, time limited, realistic, and specific—is a package of tools and training resources that can help substance abuse treatment providers transform required “paperwork” into clinically useful information. The package shows providers how to use data collected via the Addiction Severity Index (ASI) to assess patients’ substance abuse, to develop effective treatment plans, and to monitor outcomes. ASI data can be used to ensure that treatment objectives are measurable, attainable, time limited, realistic, and specific.

“Treatment programs are choking on data collection requirements . . . [and] almost none of the data collected are used in clinical decision-making or program planning—it is just paperwork.”
—McLellan et al., 2003

The ASI: What It Can Do for You

The ASI’s semi-structured interview format (1) enables clinicians to gather required information, (2) helps the client and clinician identify problems and agree on goals, objectives, and interventions, (3) provides information useful in justifying the need for continued services, and (4) provides a basis for documentation and discharge planning.

As stated in Principles of Drug Addiction Treatment: A Research-Based Guide, “To be effective, treatment must address the individual’s drug abuse and any associated medical, psychological, social, vocational, and legal problems.” Practitioners can use ASI to match services to clients’ individual problems, which helps improve retention in treatment. Clients “whose problems are identified at admission and then receive services that are matched to those problems, stay in treatment longer.”

The ASI can help you

- Identify client problems not addressed by in-house services;
- Quantify the severity of client problems or needs over time;
- Provide a quantifiable measure of program success;
- Document unmet client service needs; and
- Capture the data needed in reports for TEDS, CARF, JCAHO, grants management, managed care, and other stakeholders.

Why Treatment Planning M.A.T.R.S.?

Research shows that after providers administer the ASI, they often file the findings instead of using them to customize effective treatments for their clients. Treatment Planning M.A.T.R.S. is designed to change this practice and help clinicians, supervisors, and managers make good use of ASI data. After all, the ASI is one of the most reliable and valid measurements of the nature and severity of substance use-related problems. Universally used in clinical settings, it provides patient-specific information in six key areas: medical status, employment and support, alcohol and drug use, legal status, family/social status, and psychiatric status. Using this information appropriately can help treatment providers address the needs of individual clients and improve treatment outcomes.
