

Panel Vector Autoregression in R with the Package panelvar

Michael Sigmund¹, Robert Ferstl²

Abstract

In this paper we extend two general methods of moment (GMM) estimators to panel vector autoregression models (PVAR) with p lags of endogenous variables, predetermined and strictly exogenous variables. We first extend the first difference GMM estimator to this extended PVAR model. Second, we do the same for the system GMM estimator. We implement these estimators in the R package panelvar. In addition to the GMM estimators, we contribute to the empirical literature by implementing common specification tests (Hansen overidentification test, lag selection criterion and stability test of the PVAR polynomial) and classical structural analysis for PVAR models such as orthogonal and generalized impulse response functions, bootstrapped confidence intervals for impulse response analysis and forecast error variance decompositions. Finally, we implement the first difference and the forward orthogonal transformation to remove the fixed effects.

1. Introduction

Over the past decades important advances have been made in the study of dynamic panel data models with fixed effects for the typical setting that cross-sectional dimension (N) is large and the time dimension (T) is short. Classical OLS-based regression methods cannot be applied because of the Nickell bias (Nickell, 1981) that does not disappear asymptotically if $N \rightarrow \infty$ and T is fixed. One solution to this problem is to apply generalized method of moments estimators popularized by Hansen (1982) in economics. Important contributions are Anderson and Hsiao (1982), Holtz-Eakin et al. (1988), Arellano and Bond (1991), Arellano and Bover (1995) and Blundell and Bond (1998).

Institutions and Growth Carlos Góes,2015-07-27 Both sides of the institutions and growth debate have resorted largely to microeconomic techniques in testing hypotheses In this paper I build a panel structural vector autoregression SVAR model for a short panel of 119 countries over 10 years and find support for the institutions hypothesis Controlling for individual fixed effects I find that exogenous shocks to a proxy for institutional quality have a positive and statistically significant effect on GDP per capita On average a 1 percent shock in institutional quality leads to a peak 1.7 percent increase in GDP per capita after six years Results are robust to using a different proxy for institutional quality There are different dynamics for advanced economies and developing countries This suggests diminishing returns to institutional quality improvements

Europe has sparked a debate about the consequences of this shock on public finances. This paper uses quarterly data for a sample of 26 European countries over the period 2001–2012 to investigate the impact of refugee inflow on public spending. We use a Panel Vector Autoregression (PVAR) model to isolate the impact of refugee shocks. Our study leads to the following results: 1) the refugee shock induces an increase of government spending in the very short run. However, the refugee shock explains only 2.05% of the change in government spending. 2) Though not significant, the impact of refugees on government spending is higher in countries which are members of the Euro zone. 3) The empirical analysis also shows that the response of government spending to a refugee shock is on average higher in countries which have adopted labour market reforms. Finally, the results of this study show that government spending is more sensitive to common shocks than idiosyncratic shocks.
