Conferences and Conventions Tony Rogers,2003 Written in an accessible way this book explores the conference and conventions industry Aimed at HND and undergraduate degree students on event management and hospitality management courses as well as practioners and event managers it includes a global range of case studies from Great Britain Dubai Thaliand Canada and Australia amongst others Questions and practical assignments at the end of each chapter encourage the reader to test their knowledge and consider issues raised ECMLG2012-Proceedings of the 8th European Conference on Management, Leadership and Governance John Politis,2012 Published by Academic Conferences and Publishing International Limited Edited by Professor John Politis Neapolis University Pafos Cyprus CD version of the proceedings of the 8th European Conference on Management Leadership and Governance ECMLG 2012 hosted by the Neapolis University on the 8 9 November 2012 567 pages Meetings, Expositions, Events and Conventions Fenich,2008-09 Network Analysis and the organisation of events Alexandra Becker,2002-03-19 Inhaltsangabe Abstract Within the framework of this thesis a questionnaire based survey was carried out among British conference organisers to find out the extent to which the use of project network techniques as a planning and monitoring tool has become widespread which advantages or disadvantages it has when used in conference management and on which factors the use of PNT depends In conference related literature little attention is paid to these techniques their existence is only mentioned in a brief sentence if at all However conference management is project management and therefore a systematic formalised planning approach should be imperative The survey revealed that PNT s are not a commonly used planning tool among conference organisers Only one of the 63 respondents indicated that they use network analysis software Reasons for not using network analysis include the costs and above all the ignorance about its benefits Popular techniques to plan and monitor events are hand written or computer stored tasklists For particular requirements such as registration badging invoicing etc meeting planning software is used However it is not used very often for scheduling and budgeting which are the two main areas of application of network analysis The survey and a closer look at commercial meeting planning software reveal that network analysis features are not incorporated Cross tabulations between the variable Use of meeting planning software and demographic and company specific factors age sex position nature of organisation number of employees number of events organised each year revealed that there is a general tendency to not use meeting planning software However generalisations cannot be made because the number of respondents within the different response categories is generally too low to allow for valid statistical statements
