

Put it all together

Use the instructions to assemble the base and side panels of the automaton.

When you have finished, the automaton should look like this.

But wait... how can a ball climb up stairs?

The ball is pushed up the stairs by the force of the air. The air is blown from the bottom of the automaton, through the holes in the side panels, and up the stairs.

As the ball reaches the top of the stairs, it is pushed back down by the force of gravity. The ball then starts to climb up the stairs again.

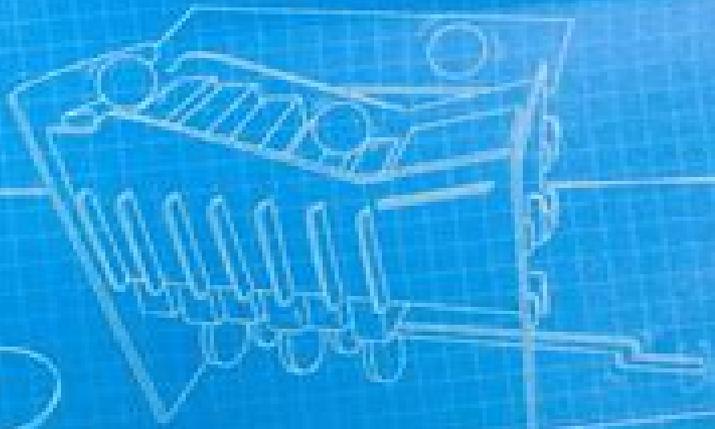

In this way, the ball doesn't really climb up the stairs at all - it falls down them!

Being made with your own hands is a great way to learn about science and technology.

When you have finished, the automaton should look like this.
