

Accounting cycle 1-8

- 1. Identify accounts affected by each transaction
- 2. Determine debits and credits for each account

1. Analyze each transaction to determine which accounts are affected and how they are affected (debit or credit). This step involves identifying the accounts involved in the transaction and determining the effect of the transaction on each account.

2. Determine the debit and credit amounts for each account. The total debits must equal the total credits for each transaction. This step involves calculating the amount of the debit and credit for each account and ensuring that the debits equal the credits.

3. Journalize the transactions. This step involves recording the transactions in the journal in chronological order. Each entry should include the date, a brief description of the transaction, and the debit and credit amounts.

4. Post the journal entries to the ledger. This step involves transferring the debit and credit amounts from the journal to the appropriate T-accounts in the ledger.

5. Calculate the ending balances for each account. This step involves summing the debits and credits for each account to determine the ending balance.

6. Prepare a trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts and their ending balances to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits.

7. Adjust the trial balance. This step involves identifying any errors or adjustments that need to be made to the trial balance, such as correcting a typo or adding a missing entry.

8. Prepare the financial statements. This step involves using the adjusted trial balance to prepare the income statement, balance sheet, and statement of equity.

9. Close the books. This step involves transferring the net income or loss from the income statement to the retained earnings account and closing the temporary accounts.

10. Prepare a post-closing trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts and their ending balances after the closing process to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits.

11. Prepare the financial statements for the next period. This step involves repeating the process for the next accounting period.

12. Review the financial statements. This step involves reviewing the financial statements to ensure that they are accurate and complete.

13. Prepare the closing entries. This step involves recording the closing entries in the journal and posting them to the ledger.

14. Prepare the post-closing trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts and their ending balances after the closing process to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits.
