

Computing Discounts Activity

Context

When purchasing items, it is often not possible to take advantage of more than one retailer's offer on the same item. In this activity, you will compare the effect of applying successive offers on the same item. You will see that, in some circumstances, the order in which you apply the offers is important. In particular, you will see that applying a percentage discount first, and then a fixed amount discount, will give you a better price than applying the fixed amount discount first, and then the percentage discount. You will also see that applying a percentage discount first, and then a fixed amount discount, will give you a better price than applying the fixed amount discount first, and then a percentage discount.

Example: Suppose you have a 10% discount on a 100 unit item. The original price is 100.

10% of 100 is 10, so the price after the 10% discount is 90.

Suppose you have a 10 unit discount on a 100 unit item. The original price is 100.

100 minus 10 is 90, so the price after the 10 unit discount is 90.

10% of 90 is 9, so the price after the 10% discount is 81.

Item	Price before	Market	Discount %
Apple	100.00	100.00	10%
Apple	100.00	90.00	10%
Apple	90.00	90.00	10%
Apple	90.00	81.00	10%
Apple	100.00	90.00	10%
Apple	90.00	81.00	10%
