Blow,1971 Net.Journal Directory Vol. 1, Issue 2 Lawrence Krumenaker,1997-11 Rubber Compounding Ingredients: Need, Theory and Innovation C. Hepburn,1997 The objectives of rubber compounding may be essentially defined as providing optimised performance and processability generally at minimum cost by the incorporation of non rubber ingredients Optimised performance in this context refers not only to mechanical properties but also for example resistance to bacteria or particular chemicals In some applications a rubber may also need to be coloured or bonded to another material and further ingredients may be required For many years rubber compounding was largely empirical and frequently described as a black art Today it is practised predominantly on the basis of scientific principles elucidated over years of study and is still the subject of intensive research In this new report Claude Hepburn reviews the following range of compounding ingredients considering the range of materials available their particular actions and recent interesting advances Process and extender oils Process aids and surfactants Coupling agents and adhesion promoters Fire retardants bactericides and blowing agents colourants and odourants An additional indexed section containing several hundred abstracts from the Polymer Library provides many more examples of novel materials and their applications The Technology of Rubber Compounding and Processing Frank Hai-Yuan Tan,1985 Mixing of Rubber Compounds Andreas Limper,2012 It is a characteristic of the rubber industry that compounds are usually not bought from a supplier but compounded in an in house mixing facility The different mixing technologies add yet another degree of freedom to the tailoring of compound properties This book covers the major aspects of rubber compounding For the first time the reader finds all relevant issues whether it is machine design process technology or material parameters covered in one comprehensive volume An Introduction to Rubber Technology Andrew Ciesielski,1999-06-01 Rapra

Rubber Technology Maurice Morton, 2012-12-06 About ten years after the publication of the Second Edition 1973 it became apparent that it was time for an up date of this book This was especially true in this case since the subject matter has traditionally dealt mainly with the structure properties and technology of the various elastomers used in industry and these are bound to undergo significant changes over the period of a decade In revising the contents of this volume it was thought best to keep the original format Hence the first five chapters discuss the same general subject matter as before The chapters dealing with natural rubber and the synthetic elastomers are up dated and an entirely new chapter has been added on the thermoplastic elastomers which have of course grown tremendously in importance Another innovation is the addition of a new chapter Miscellaneous Elastomers to take care of old elastomers e g polysulfides which have decreased somewhat in importance as well as to introduce some of the newly developed synthetic rubbers which have not yet reached high production levels The editor wishes to express his sincere appreciation to all the contributors without whose close cooperation this task would have been impossible He would especially like to acknowledge the invaluable assistance of Dr Howard Stephens in the planning of this book and for his suggestion of suitable authors
