Students' Psychological Capital on Academic Performance Alex Mbegu, 2026-01-22 Document from the year 2020 in the subject Psychology Work Business Organisation language English abstract The main objective of this study is to examine the role of positive psychological capital on students' academic performance at Tumaini University Dar es Salaam College TUDARCo Higher education students' academic performance, well-being, and positive development are one among the least studied subjects in Sub-Saharan Africa in spite of the fact that Sub-Saharan Africa is among the largest youth populations internationally. And having several challenges in youth positive development unlike the West, though not majoring in youth population, yet they accounted for most youth development studies. According to Kapinga Amani (2015) who investigated the determinants of academic performance among undergraduate students at Mkwawa University College of Education in Tanzania, they concluded that academic performance in higher learning institutions is partly determined by how well students achieve at the pre-university level. Personal determination and socio-economic factors were similar to a study conducted by Zaituni Shabani (2013) at Aridhi University, who also concluded that pre-university scores and some socio-economic factors are major determinants for students' academic performance for higher education in Tanzania. However, there is very little attention, if not none, that is being placed on positive psychology being a factor contributing to higher students' academic performance in Tanzania. Most researched factors and those that are generally perceived by the public range from gender, learning resources, learning environments, social and economic challenges, and previous academic achievements.
