

Introduction

Arabic is the primary language of about 300 million people in North Africa and the Middle East. A recent study found that Arabic is the second most spoken language in Pakistan, the Philippines, and Iran. According to Ayoub (2018), Arabic is the official language in Chad. Minorities speak Arabic in nations including Iran, Cyprus, Turkey, various countries in central Africa, and even in former Soviet republics. In North and South America, Europe, and Australia, considerable immigrant populations speak Arabic as their first language. There are six different scripts for the Arabic language, which is an official UN language (Shah, 2012). The massive use of Arabic languages after the Islamic conquest has produced the field of Arabic linguistics. The tradition of this scientific area continues even in the modern-day, and the current linguistical thought has been influenced by foreign schools due to globalization. However, despite the popular opinion in a Western scientific society, the origins of Arabic linguistical thought are independent, which is the claim that is proven in the paper.

Evolution of the Arabic Language

The Arabic language is part of a broader family known as Semitic languages, including Akkadian, Aramaic, and Hebrew, and is spoken in the north of the Arab peninsula. Between 250 and 328 AD, the earliest written forms of the language were discovered (Baalbaki, 2008). Tombstones, ruins, and papyri all include some form of script or fragments of a script found. Arabic was widely spoken both before and after the arrival of Islam. The limited use of literature also contained a few remarkable poems and religious compositions that stood out from the others. Textual records were an exception to the oral traditions that prevailed throughout that period. Aside from that, the Holy Qur'an and poetry were some of the essential sources for the type of Arabic that was spoken at the time. As a result, poetry's glorious literary history was not written down until about the eighth century, at the time of the establishment of Islam and the discovery of the Holy Quran.
