Activity Based Costing Andreas Leitner, 2007-09-27 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2004 in the subject Business economics Accounting and Taxes grade 2 Glynd r University Wrexham known as NEWI Business school 5 entries in the bibliography language English abstract During the last decades there was a change in organisations from managing vertical to managing horizontal The organisations started to become process orientated instead of function orientated and new management styles like total quality management just in time benchmarking or business process reengineering appeared Which lead into an increase of overheads Drury 2004a The most important cost factors changed from direct costs like labour costs or materials into indirect costs like set up costs or administration costs Therefore the traditional costing systems became more or less useless because they presented poor cost information which leads into decision errors Therefore the ABC system of cost calculation seems to be a solution The most important difference between traditional systems and the ABC system is the breakdown of overheads In traditional costing systems they are divided into cost centres and accumulated products by using direct cost drivers In the ABC system they will be assigned to activities which creates a greater number of cost centres with different cost drivers They will be accumulated to products in the percentage of usage of an activity In this paper the ABC system of cost calculation is discussed and how it can be implemented successfully within an organisation Attention is also drawn to the most important failure in implementation of an ABC approach which should be avoided To establish an ABC approach within an organisation more than just a new calculation system is needed An ABC approach has to be implemented in the management system ABM and in the budgeting process ABB All in all Activity based costing is much more than just a costing tool Successfully implemented it w

Financial Systems in Troubled Waters Alessandro Carretta, Gianluca Mattarocci, 2013-05-07 This collection considers the financial crisis from a managerial perspective focussing on the business implications for the financial industry Topics examined include governance information needs and strategy of financial intermediaries and investors The contributions build on the existing literature and present some unique insights on governance credit quality evaluation and performance measurement In a fast growing or steady market it is possible for even an inefficient financial system to satisfy investors and firms needs However the current financial crisis has brought into sharp relief the limits of the inefficient practices adopted by the market and made clear the importance of developing more effective governance mechanisms more detailed and complete information databases and new strategies The crisis has also brought to the fore issues about the governance of financial intermediaries that had not been previously addressed These include board diversity internal monitoring procedures and the existence of interlocking directorates More broadly the financial crisis has radically altered the international framework with an increasingly consolidated financial sector and the rise of new markets such as China that now play a predominant role in the worldwide market Studies on the competition and on the performance in this new scenario are essential in order to understand the implications of recent events

Activity-Based Costing for Marketing and Manufacturing Ronald Lewis, 1993-05-30 The declining domination of American manufacturers in world class markets has resulted in widespread criticism of traditional costing methods Activity based accounting for manufacturing costs emerged in the 1980s to satisfy the changes taking place in production methods and techniques such as Just in Time Inventory Control and Flexible

Manufacturing Systems Although activity based costing methods may be new in manufacturing processes they have been advocated and applied by marketing managers since the late 1960s according to Professor Lewis The accounting profession has finally recognized the advantages of activity based concepts and methods for both marketing and manufacturing functions This book shows how activity based methods and other cost analysis and control techniques may be used by manufacturing and marketing managers Part I explains the cost concepts and terminology used in modern businesses and describes the concept of a fully integrated manufacturing and costing system In world class competition the costing systems must serve the total needs of management not just financial reporting requirements Costing systems must be flexible and multi purpose which is both possible and practical with state of the art computers and software Part II summarizes the traditional cost accounting systems describing job costing and standard costing systems The allocation of costs becomes more important with technological advances A full chapter is devoted to the methods of allocation and the changes required to satisfy advanced manufacturing and activity based costing techniques Part III illustrates activity based costing for manufacturing activity based costing for marketing and an activity based approach to the behavior of costs as well as explaining the traditional factors of variability Part IV describes the techniques that are necessary for analysis and control of costs by management To be well informed managers must know the fundamentals of break even analysis relevant costing capital budgeting ROI and transfer pricing The book makes these techniques easy to understand and to apply to real life situations It is particularly appropriate for manufacturing managers involved in operations and for all marketing managers
