

Student Exploration: Half-Life

Prior Knowledge Questions (Do these BEFORE using the Gizmo.)

1. What does your state's radioactive element(s) represent? How, if at all, do you use radioisotopes in your laboratory?

None. I have no laboratory access.

2. If you had the opportunity to communicate on the topic of applying radioactive elements, what is the single biggest idea you would want to convey?

Radioactive elements have a fixed amount of time before they decay.

Warm-Up

Like uncooked spaghetti, the substance is radioactive until it is changed to another, stable substance. The process by which radioactive nuclei, located in particles called atoms, change is called decay. In this process, atoms decay into stable substances. It changes into another stable substance.

The half-life of a substance is the amount of time it takes for half of the substance to decay. The unit of time used is minutes and the half-life is 10.

3. What do you predict will happen?

A. The number of atoms will decrease.

Notes: The following simulation uses these radioactive subatomic particles to produce and change isotopes, allowing radioactive atoms.

4. What happens at the end of the half-life period?

Nothing happens.

5. In the simulation, what is the beginning, middle, or end of the process?

The half-life period is the end of the beginning.
