

Accounting cycle 1-8

- 1. Identify the accounts affected by each transaction.
- 2. Determine the debit and credit amounts for each account.

3. Record the journal entry in the journal. The journal entry should include the date, a brief description of the transaction, and the debit and credit amounts.

4. Post the journal entry to the ledger. The ledger is a collection of accounts, each with its own T-account. The debit and credit amounts from the journal entry are transferred to the appropriate T-accounts.

5. Calculate the ending balances for each account. The ending balance is the difference between the debit and credit amounts in each T-account.

6. Prepare the trial balance. The trial balance is a statement that lists the ending balances for all accounts. It is used to check for errors in the accounting cycle.

7. Prepare the financial statements. The financial statements are prepared based on the ending balances from the trial balance.

8. Close the books. The closing process involves transferring the ending balances from the temporary accounts to the permanent accounts.

9. Prepare the post-closing trial balance. The post-closing trial balance is prepared after the closing process is complete. It shows the ending balances for all permanent accounts.

10. Prepare the financial statements for the next period. The financial statements are prepared for the next period based on the ending balances from the post-closing trial balance.

11. Prepare the closing entries. The closing entries are prepared to transfer the ending balances from the temporary accounts to the permanent accounts.

12. Prepare the adjusting entries. The adjusting entries are prepared to adjust the ending balances for any errors or omissions.

13. Prepare the journal entries. The journal entries are prepared to record the adjusting entries.

14. Prepare the trial balance. The trial balance is prepared to check for errors in the accounting cycle.

15. Prepare the financial statements. The financial statements are prepared based on the ending balances from the trial balance.

16. Prepare the closing entries. The closing entries are prepared to transfer the ending balances from the temporary accounts to the permanent accounts.
