NUMBER & CHARACTER

Integer
 The integer data type represents whole numbers, both positive and negative. It is the most common data type in C++ and is used for counting, indexing, and other operations that require discrete values. The range of an integer is typically from -2,147,483,648 to 2,147,483,647.

Character
 The character data type represents a single character, such as a letter, digit, or symbol. It is used for storing and manipulating text. The range of a character is from 0 to 255, representing all possible ASCII values.

Short Integer
 The short integer data type is a smaller version of the integer data type, typically ranging from -32,768 to 32,767. It is used for storing and manipulating small integers.

Long Integer
 The long integer data type is a larger version of the integer data type, typically ranging from -9,223,372,036,854,775,808 to 9,223,372,036,854,775,807. It is used for storing and manipulating large integers.

Character Array
 A character array is a sequence of characters stored in memory. It is used for storing and manipulating strings of text. The length of a character array is limited by the amount of memory available.

Character Pointer
 A character pointer is a variable that stores the memory address of the first character in a character array. It is used for pointing to and manipulating strings of text.

Character Constant
 A character constant is a single character enclosed in single quotes. It is used for representing a single character in a program. For example, 'A' is a character constant.

Character Array Declaration
 A character array is declared by specifying the number of characters it can hold, followed by the array name. For example, `char array[10];` declares a character array named `array` that can hold 10 characters.

Character Array Initialization
 A character array can be initialized with a string of characters. For example, `char array[10] = "Hello";` initializes the `array` with the string "Hello".

Character Array Access
 Individual characters in a character array can be accessed using their index. For example, `array[0]` accesses the first character in the array.

Character Array Iteration
 A loop can be used to iterate over all the characters in a character array. For example, a `for` loop can be used to print each character in the array.

Character Array Comparison
 Two character arrays can be compared to see if they are equal. This is done using the `strcmp` function.
