

Colour

Colour is often one of the most exciting components of a painting, but what exactly is it? Understanding the basic principles of colour theory helps you analyse how artists exploit and manipulate it to their work. They use colour together with composition, perspective, and light and shade to strengthen the impact of the artwork itself.

Mixing and comparing colours

The spectrum of light makes colour visible. Light from a source of different angles, either from the sun or from an artificial source, is made up of different colours. The range of wavelengths that we can see is called the visible spectrum; the shorter visible wavelengths appear as violet and the longest as red. Artists use pigments from powdered minerals that absorb some wavelengths and reflect others. Use of coloured fluorescent pigments in a painting can provide the means of reflecting light.

The colour wheel

Colour relationships are set out on the colour wheel, which is based on the visible spectrum. The primary colours (red, yellow and blue) are the basic colours that can be mixed to create all other colours. The secondary colours (orange, green and purple) are created by mixing two primary colours. The tertiary colours (red-orange, yellow-orange, yellow-green, green, cyan, blue, blue-violet, violet and magenta) are created by mixing a primary colour with a secondary colour. The colour wheel is a useful tool for understanding colour relationships and for creating a colour palette.

Primary and secondary
The primary colors are red, yellow and blue. The secondary colors are orange, green and purple.

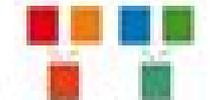

Warm and cool

Colors are often divided into warm and cool. Warm colors are red, orange, yellow and red-orange. Cool colors are blue, green and purple.

More colour mixtures

Other color mixtures include brown, tan, grey, black, white, and pink. These are created by mixing primary and secondary colors.

Neutral colors are black, white, grey, and brown. These are created by mixing primary and secondary colors.

Intensity

The intensity of a color is its brightness. It is measured on a scale from 0 (black) to 100 (white). The intensity of a color is affected by the amount of light it reflects.

Temperature is the quality of a color that makes it feel warm or cool. Warm colors are red, orange, yellow, and red-orange. Cool colors are blue, green, and purple.

Value is the lightness or darkness of a color. It is measured on a scale from 0 (black) to 100 (white). The value of a color is affected by the amount of light it reflects.

How artists use colour

Artists use color to create a mood or atmosphere in their work. They use color to draw the viewer's eye to a particular part of the painting. They use color to create a sense of depth and space. They use color to create a sense of movement and rhythm.

GLOSSARY INDEX AND ACKNOWLEDGMENTS National Galleries Simon Knell,2016-01-22 Are national galleries different from other kinds of art gallery or museum What value is there for the nation in a collection of international masterpieces How are national galleries involved in the construction national art National Galleries is the first book to undertake a panoramic view of a type of national institution which are sometimes called national museums of fine art that is now found in almost every nation on earth Adopting a richly illustrated globally inclusive comparative view Simon

Knell argues that national galleries should not be understood as great galleries but as peculiar sites where art is made to perform in acts of nation building. A book that fundamentally rewrites the history of these institutions and encourages the reader to dispense with elitist views of their worth. Knell reveals an unseen geography and a rich complexity of performance. He considers the ways the national galleries entangle art and nation and the differing trajectories and purposes of international and national art. Exploring galleries, artists, and artworks from around the world, National Galleries is an argument about how we think about and study these institutions. Privileging the situatedness of each national gallery performance and valuing localism over universalism, Knell looks particularly at how national art is constructed and represented. He ends with examples that show the mutability of national art and by questioning the necessity of art nationalism. Material Culture Review, 2009

Allanah, Buck, Catman, Chelsea, Michael, Pamela, and Thomas Marc Quinn, 2010. Marc Quinn has always been interested in the public's obsession with the body, its perfections and flaws, and how this obsession has led some people to alter their bodies in increasingly extreme ways. This exhibition brought together new sculptures executed in marble, bronze, and silver depicting people who have undergone extreme levels of plastic surgery and transformation, including hormone therapy, tattoos, piercing, skin bleaching, and hair dyeing, as well as implants and transplants. The people depicted included cartoon characters, minor porn stars, and celebrities. OCLC
