The scientific method is a systematic process of observation and experimentation to gather evidence about the natural world. It involves making observations, asking questions, forming hypotheses, testing hypotheses, and drawing conclusions.

Primary and Secondary Sources

Information we read about events, people, and places can be primary or secondary. Primary sources are information that comes directly from the source.

They were written or recorded by the people who lived at a particular moment in time. Primary sources include diaries, letters, photographs, newspaper articles, and other documents that were created at the time of the event.

Secondary sources are information that comes from people who were not present at the event. They are created after the event and often include information from primary sources. Examples include textbooks, encyclopedias, and other reference works.

Secondary sources are often used to provide context and background information about an event or person. They can also be used to compare and contrast different accounts of the same event.

Remember to look at both primary and secondary sources when you are researching a topic. This will help you to get a more complete picture of the event and to understand the different perspectives on it.

Primary Sources

Primary sources are a first-hand account of an event or experience. They are created at the time of the event and often include information that was not available to secondary sources. Examples include diaries, letters, photographs, and other documents that were created at the time of the event.

Secondary Sources

Secondary sources are information that comes from people who were not present at the event. They are created after the event and often include information from primary sources.
