Space-Time Adaptive Processing

[A knowledge-based perspective for airborne radar]

This article provides a brief review of radar space-time adaptive processing (STAP) from its inception to state-of-the-art developments. The topic is treated from both intuitive and theoretical aspects. A key requirement of STAP is knowledge of the spectral characteristics underlying the interference scenario of interest. However, these are seldom known in practice and must be estimated using training data. The collection of training data in a given scenario is limited by the scale of change of the interference phenomenon with respect to space and time as well as by system considerations such as bandwidth. Increasingly complex interference scenarios give rise to stressful conditions of training support, and the choice of training data becomes a crucial component of the adaptive process. Additional issues of importance in STAP include the computational cost of the adaptive algorithm as well as the ability to maintain a constant false alarm rate (CFAR) over widely varying interference statistics. This article addresses these topics, developing the need for a knowledge-based (KB) perspective.

Signal detection using adaptive processing in spatial and temporal domains offers significant benefits in a variety of applications including radar, sonar, satellite communications, and seismic systems [1]. The focus here is on signal processing for radar systems using multiple antenna elements that coherently process multiple pulses. An adaptive array of spatially distributed sensors, which processes multiple temporal snapshots, overcomes the directivity and resolution limitations of a single sensor. Specifically, using STAP, i.e., joint adaptive processing in the spatial and temporal domains, creates an ability to suppress interfering signals while simultaneously preserving gain on the
