Immigration

How Did Immigration Change?

Immigration changed dramatically from the late 19th century to the 1920s. In the late 19th century, most immigrants came from Europe. In the 1920s, most immigrants came from Asia and Latin America.

What Did Immigrants Do?

In 1890, the majority of immigrants were Irish, Italian, and German. By 1920, the majority of immigrants were from Eastern Europe and Asia. Immigrants worked in factories, mines, and on farms. They also started businesses.

Immigration and the U.S.

Immigration helped the U.S. become a world power. Immigrants brought new ideas and skills. They also helped build the U.S. economy. However, some people were afraid of immigrants. They thought immigrants would take jobs and lower wages.

During the 1920s, immigration was restricted. The Immigration Act of 1924 set the number of immigrants from each country. This act was based on the number of people who lived in that country in 1890.

Immigrants arriving at Ellis Island in the early 20th century. Many immigrants were from Europe.

The New Immigrants

The new immigrants came from Italy, Greece, and other parts of Europe. They were different from the old immigrants. They were more educated and had more money. They came to the U.S. to start businesses and work in factories. They were called the "New Immigrants."

Ellis Island

Ellis Island was the main place for new immigrants. It was a large building with many rooms. Immigrants had to go through a lot of checks before they could enter the U.S. Some people were turned away because they were sick or didn't have enough money.

Some people went to Angel Island. It was a small island in San Francisco Bay. Immigrants had to stay there for a few days before they could enter the U.S. Some people were turned away because they didn't have enough money or didn't have a job. Some people were turned away because they were from a country that was not allowed to immigrate.

Chapter 7 Section 1 The New Immigrants Answer Key:

The New Immigration Leif Jensen, 1989-03-24 Lofty sentiments notwithstanding the United States has consistently sought to exclude impoverished immigrants from entering the country on the grounds that many become dependent on social welfare institutions Leif Jensen thoroughly explores the nature of poverty and public assistance utilization among immigrants to the United States during the years 1960 to 1980 Among the questions he explores are Has there been an increase in the level of poverty and the degree of public assistance utilized by immigrants to the United States during the past twenty years How do these levels compare to those for native born Americans and across key racial and ethnic groups How do individual and family characteristics affect the propensity of families to be poor or to receive public assistance Following an introduction to the study as a whole Jensen presents theoretical issues that bear on differences in poverty and welfare use He reviews U S immigration history with particular emphasis on those aspects that are relevant to poverty and the receipt of public assistance The chapters that follow review methodological issues then present the results of Jensen s empirical analysis two chapters focus on poverty at the family level and two consider public assistance utilization These chapters build a conceptual background for a multivariate model of poverty at the family level Because the mere propensity to receive public assistance is only one aspect of the welfare burden imposed by a particular group the author also examines the absolute amount of public assistance received Finally he synthesizes the key findings of his empirical analysis drawing conclusions regarding the pervasiveness of poverty and actual public assistance receipt among new immigrants Jensen s thorough analysis and provocative conclusions make this book essential reading for those interested in sociology demography economics and political science
