

CHAPTER 19 PARTNERSHIPS: FORMATION AND OPERATION

Chapter Outline

1. Business organizations that are formed legally as partnerships, although they are not always so called in conversation, are governed throughout their entire existence by the legal, technical, and accounting principles.
 - a. Advantages of the partnership form include ease of creation and the absence of the double taxation often inherent in the creation of a corporation and its subsequent distribution of income.
 - b. Partnership taxation tends to be a significant one when compared with other common organizational forms because of the inherent liability being distributed to each general partner.
 - c. Partnership legal forms have been created over the years to combine the benefits of corporations and partnerships such as S corporations, limited liability partnerships, and limited liability companies.
2. Partnership accounting and the capital account
 - a. The historical aspects of partnership accounting center on the capital account maintained by each individual partner.
 - b. The issue of accounting for these capital interests is the matter of partnership agreement which involves the process by which investments, withdrawals, additions of a new partner, retirement of a partner, etc.
 - c. The most common issue is the manner in which the partners should be treated as the capital account is adjusted upon business events which is dependent on each partnership but as a particular aspect of an individual firm's plan.
 - i. In the cost method, each partner's equity is valued and recorded. The equity contribution of an individual is valued at the percentage of the total investment being made by all partners.
 - ii. In the goodwill method, the amount being contributed and the corresponding percentage of the total capital interest are used to calculate the value of the business and the percentage goodwill of each partner's equity is recorded as an intangible asset.
3. Partnership closing situation
 - a. At the end of each fiscal period, the receipts and expenses accounts must be closed and with the resulting income figure being assigned to the individual capital accounts.
 - b. The method of adjusting interest in the capital accounts should be consistent with the nature of partnership.
