

ELEMENTS OF A GRID

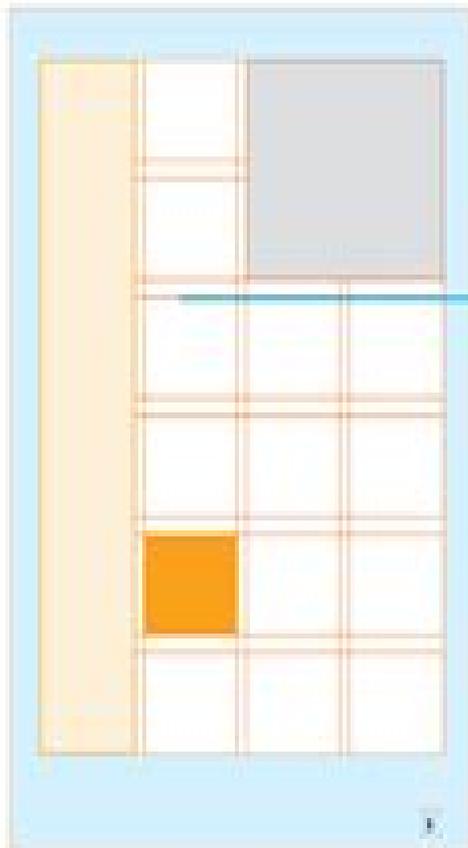

1. Know the Components

The main components of a grid are margins, columns, columns, headings, gutters, lines, and baselines. Starting with a page that is four pages wide and four pages high, you can see how all of these elements work together to create a grid.

MARGINS are vertical columns that define the space between the text and the edges of the page. The width and number of margins on a page or across the entire document are determined by the content.

MODULES are individual elements, typically, repeated across a grid. They can be text, images, or graphics. They are arranged in a grid and are separated by margins and lines.

MARGINS are the space between the text and the edges of the page. They are defined by the margins and the page content. Margins can be used to separate information, such as text and images.

MARGINS are groups of margins or columns that are used to define the space between the text and the edges of the page.

FLYLINE is a horizontal line that runs across the page and is used to separate the text from the images and graphics.
