NUMBER & CHARACTER

Integer
 The integer data type represents whole numbers, both positive and negative. It is the most common data type used in C++ programs. The range of values that can be stored in an integer depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from -2,147,483,648 to 2,147,483,647.

Character
 The character data type represents a single character, such as a letter, digit, or symbol. It is typically stored as a byte of memory. The range of values that can be stored in a character depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from 0 to 255.

Short Integer
 The short integer data type represents whole numbers, both positive and negative. It is typically used when memory is a concern. The range of values that can be stored in a short integer depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from -32,768 to 32,767.

Long Integer
 The long integer data type represents whole numbers, both positive and negative. It is typically used when a larger range of values is needed. The range of values that can be stored in a long integer depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from -9,223,372,036,854,775,808 to 9,223,372,036,854,775,807.

Float
 The float data type represents real numbers, including fractions and decimals. It is typically used when a range of values is needed. The range of values that can be stored in a float depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from 1.18e-38 to 3.4e+38.

Double
 The double data type represents real numbers, including fractions and decimals. It is typically used when a larger range of values is needed. The range of values that can be stored in a double depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from 2.2e-308 to 1.8e+308.

Complex
 The complex data type represents complex numbers, which have both a real and an imaginary part. It is typically used in scientific and engineering applications. The range of values that can be stored in a complex number depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from 1.18e-38 to 3.4e+38 for the real part and from 1.18e-38 to 3.4e+38 for the imaginary part.

String
 The string data type represents a sequence of characters. It is typically used to store text. The range of values that can be stored in a string depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from 0 to 255.

Character Array
 The character array data type represents a sequence of characters. It is typically used to store text. The range of values that can be stored in a character array depends on the compiler and the platform. For example, on a 32-bit system, the range is typically from 0 to 255.
