Foundations of Government

Lesson 3: The Role of Government in Economic Systems

I. Fundamentals of Economics

A. Every economy has consumers, distributors, consumers, labor, resources, and capital.

B. The key questions answered by all economic systems are: What and how much to be produced? How are these goods and services produced? When gets the goods and services that are produced?

C. Economic systems classified by how they work are identified as traditional, market, or command.

II. Capitalism

A. Laissez-faire, which means "to let alone," describes how the role of government in a capitalist economy.

B. The free interrelationship of goods, capital, and demand ownership and control of property and economic resources, free enterprise, competition, freedom of choice, and the possibility of profits.

III. Mixed Economies

A. A mixed economy combines characteristics of both capitalism and communism.

B. The economy of the United States is a mixed system that is more capitalist economy because the government has developed a large number of goods and services, in particular some commodities, and it has created programs to provide basic economic security.

IV. Socialism

A. The goal of socialism is the achieve an equal distribution of wealth.

B. Democratic socialists believe government is necessary in free political systems, but they are worried in their desire for government involvement in the distribution of wealth.

V. Communism, or Command Economy

A. In a communist economy, the government decides how much to produce, what to produce, and how to distribute the goods and services produced. This is called a command economy because there is no private ownership of the means of production. Karl Marx's theory of communism stated that the suffering created by industrialization would create deep divisions between the capitalist owners of the means of production and the workers who produced the goods. The workers would revolt against the capitalist owners and the system would change. In the republics that the communism and overthrow by communism.

Summary and Reflection

Students' answers should include a description of both a mixed economy and a capitalist economy with comparisons that note of government in each. In a mixed economy, the government plays a significant role in economic decisions. Such is desire that contemporary countries like economy. The government provides social services for some but that people is not provided a mixed system distributions of wealth. In a mixed economy, that government plays a role in the economy. Such there also is less significant. There are extensions of capitalism, such as private ownership, free enterprise, competition, freedom of choice, and the possibility of profits, that the government regulates certain aspects of the economy and redistributes money (social welfare programs).
