DESCRIPTION

The Powerglide transmission is a four-speed, manual, sliding-shaft type. It is designed to be used with the Buick Special dual-path drive or the Buick Wildcat dual-path drive. The transmission is mounted to the rear of the engine and is connected to the rear axle by a driveshaft. The transmission is a cast-iron housing with a cast-iron case. The input shaft is connected to the engine and the output shaft is connected to the rear axle. The transmission is a sliding-shaft type, which means that the input and output shafts are not fixed to the housing. This allows the input and output shafts to slide relative to the housing, which is necessary for the transmission to operate. The transmission is a four-speed manual, which means that it has four forward gears and one reverse gear. The gears are arranged in a straight line, which means that the input and output shafts are parallel.
