Scientists have conducted experiments on many different animals to determine whether there are any relationships between body size and metabolic rate. They use a variety of different experimental techniques to measure metabolic rate. One technique is to measure the amount of oxygen that an animal uses over a certain period of time. This is called the animal's oxygen consumption rate. The amount of oxygen that an animal uses is directly related to its metabolic rate. The more oxygen an animal uses, the higher its metabolic rate is.

Scientists have also conducted experiments on alligators to determine whether there are any relationships between body size and metabolic rate. They measured the metabolic rate of alligators of different sizes by measuring the amount of oxygen that they used over a certain period of time. They then created a scatter plot of the data and found a positive correlation between alligator size and metabolic rate.
