

ELEMENTS OF A GRID

1. Know the Components

The main components of a grid are margins, columns, columns, headings, gutters, lines, and baselines. Starting with a page that is four pages wide and four pages high, let's see how you might use these elements to create a layout.

MARGINS are vertical columns that define the space between the text and the edges of the page. The width and number of margins on a page or across the entire spread are determined by the content.

MODULES are individual elements, typically, repeated across a grid. Consistent modules can create interest and ease of reading.

MARGINS are the space between the text and the edges of the page. The width and number of margins on a page or across the entire spread are determined by the content.

MARGINS are groups of elements or content that are used to define the space between the text and the edges of the page.

FLYLINE is a horizontal line that runs across the page, typically used to separate the text from the content.

BASIC GRID DIAGRAMS

2. Learn the Basic Structures

Although the diagrams below show common structures, there are additional variations on the basic configurations. The illustrations guide the designer and help them understand how to use the grid.

1 COLUMN GRID is a simple grid for content that is centered on the page. The width of the content is determined by the page width and the margins.

2 COLUMN GRID is used for content that is centered on the page. The width of the content is determined by the page width and the margins.

2 COLUMN GRID can be used to create a grid with two columns of content. The width of the content is determined by the page width and the margins.

MULTICOLUMN GRID is used for content that is centered on the page. The width of the content is determined by the page width and the margins.
