

A group of four diverse students (three young men and one young woman) are sitting around a light-colored wooden table in a classroom setting. They are all smiling and looking towards the center. The woman in the foreground is writing in a notebook with a blue pen. The man to her right is holding a yellow pencil. The man to her left is looking at her. The woman behind her is also smiling. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

How important is motivation in second language learning? I. Magel,2017-06-15 Seminar paper from the year 2012 in the subject Didactics for the subject English Pedagogy Literature Studies grade 2 0 Saarland University language English abstract Motivation in second language learning is an increasingly important area in applied linguistics The current state of research is characterized by many different approaches which have developed over time Today there are still divided views about motivation The social psychological approach dominated until the early 1990s Criticized later supplemented and eventually replaced by pedagogical and psychological concepts In order to understand the importance of motivation in second language learning it is important to look at different types of motivation after clarifying the definition of the term motivation used in the text below This paper has been divided into three parts First I will give a definition of the term motivation Then I will focus on different kinds of motivation especially the distinctions between motivation regarding learning in general by Deci and Ryan and motivation especially in language learning by Gardner Finally the practical part deals with motivation in second language classroom in Saarland Thus the main question addressed in this paper is How important is motivation in second language learning
