

- Consumable activities
- Consumable activities are the ones that will reduce the nation's income. They produce a net outflow of resources.
- These activities are divided into:
  - Primary sector: It includes activities like agriculture, fishing, hunting etc.
  - Secondary Sector: It includes manufacturing and extraction.
  - Tertiary sector: It includes activities like transport, services, trading etc.
- All consumable activities are profitable due to the fact that they make contributions to consumption savings. However, society might not offer savings to individuals' activities which give demand as compensation to people who produce them and hence as market activities. However, they do contribute the flow of pay (value) output to people. Government activities, production of goods for sale, and consumption of services. These market activities do not provide the individual an income. They are done for self-consumption. The income is given by selling a factor (labor) owned by the household, a factor pricing output to itself from society.
- The non-market activities done by members are not paid. Hence are included as national income. However, if this activity, like cooking, is performed for someone then it can be included.
- Education and skills of a person themselves have to be paid, as skilled people can perform better work than a person without any skills. However, generally there are skills and their education that is not paid for people.
